MARSHALL

McKool Smith has developed a preeminent law practice before the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Texas. Since the 1960's, the federal court in East Texas has been known for quickly resolving high-stakes commercial disputes. It often takes 18 months or less for a complex commercial dispute to go to trial in East Texas – approximately half the time of many other federal districts. The federal bench in East Texas has long been blessed with outstanding judges who employ a “fast track” docket system for resolving disputes quickly and efficiently.

Heading our East Texas office is former judge Sam Baxter. Mr. Baxter's long-term legal practice, community involvement and judicial experience in Marshall have provided him with special familiarity in the Eastern District courts. His extensive trial experience makes Mr. Baxter an integral part of the McKool Smith team in almost every major trial handled by the firm.
