

INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY LITIGATION

Intellectual property is a phrase used to describe creations of the mind. These can be inventions, creative solutions, innovations, and even new processes. Intellectual property represents a company's most valuable assets. When those assets are threatened, businesses often come to us for help. Many companies rely on McKool Smith to master the intricacies of their intellectual property, and protect their business interests in court.

With a new paradigm emerging in patent infringement cases, clients are demanding that lawyers with significant civil trial experience handle important technology and patent cases. McKool Smith can meet that demand. In addition to being skilled trial attorneys, the group has the legal and technical expertise to persuade judges and juries on technologically complex issues.

The 21st Century will present unprecedented opportunities and challenges.