Dear Colleague:

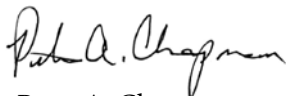

“Coming together is a beginning; keeping together is progress; working together is success.” After twenty years, it seems that we have achieved Henry Ford’s definition of success. None of the ingredients for his definition would have been possible, however, without the impressive support and generosity of our sponsors. Their constancy, innovation, and dedication to this conference have, for twenty years, been nothing less than dazzling. While we have said it over and over, we mean it sincerely every time: We are grateful to our sponsors and we couldn’t have done any of this without you.

The talent and wealth of experience that our speakers bring to this conference year after year cannot be overstated. These are extraordinary professionals who, for twenty years, have made a priceless contribution to this annual event and have assured its high caliber. Our deepest thanks to each and every speaker.

And finally, we extend our most earnest appreciation to you, our attendees. You might be reading this letter of welcome for the first time, or you may be skimming over it as an “old timer.” Either way, your interest, your enthusiasm, and your input have helped to shape and keep fresh this fascinating conference. We sincerely thank you for attending.

We hope to keep “working together” with our sponsors and speakers for many years to come in order to perpetuate this unique conference and to attract new and veteran participants alike. Thank you all for helping us celebrate our 20th year of success.

Sincerely,

Peter A. Chapman

Last year our speaker discussed the risk of an economy governed from Washington and concluded that the handling of the end of QE II and QE III would be difficult. This year the Federal Reserve punted on ending QE III and there looks to be no end in sight of this popular but problematic printing program. Our speaker, Steve Gidumal, is always thought provoking and is back for his 18th year and will review the year in distressed investing, bringing his insights and unique perspectives on what to expect in the coming year.

Before Jefferson County's Chapter 9 filing in Nov. 2011, there were few historical Chapter 9 municipality filings. Since then, Stockton, San Bernardino and Detroit filed Chapter 9 petitions. Jefferson County is now on the verge of confirming a Plan of Adjustment and emerging from bankruptcy. What have we learned so far about Chapter 9? Why is it different from Chapter 11 and seemingly more difficult? Are there opportunities for distressed investors in these cases? Does Chapter 9 provide investors a stable forum in which they can analyze and make sound decisions? Can we better predict what's going to happen in future municipal restructurings?

The Panel will be discussing what bondholders/certificate holders need to do to protect their interest vis-a-vis indenture trustees, bond insurers and the issuers focusing in on municipal restructuring. The Panel will discuss the basics of how the indentures work, the decision to hire counsel and financial advisors, the opportunities for investors, the remedies available to investors/certificate holders, the risk they face in working with and directing the Indenture Trustees and possible indemnification questions and conflicting directions from the insurers who may have their own agendas. We will also be discussing which of these parties are taking the lead on municipal restructurings and why.

As a company enters the "zone of insolvency," the fiduciary duties owed by directors and officers begin to shift from equityholders to creditors. The Corporate and Financial World seem to have become increasingly impatient with “free fall” bankruptcies which have no resolution or exit strategy in sight. This Panel will discuss the constituencies and dynamics which have become prevalent in arriving at resolution in major bond debt cases—both pre- and post-petition. This ranges from exchange offers to out-of-court settlements and declaratory judgment actions to pre-negotiated plans to bankruptcy settlements. This Panel will focus on recent strategies and cases, the mechanisms to get bondholders and indenture trustees on board, and the additional challenges and issues presented by dissident minority holders.

This panel will examine two timely ethical topics in the corporate restructuring industry:

What are the implications of “shareholder activism going mainstream” (as PRWeek recently termed it) for distressed companies? Are there (or should there be) different limits on the activities of activist shareholders and other stakeholders as a company approaches or enters the zone of insolvency? How should distressed companies and their advisors handle activist stakeholders whose actions are detrimental to the company’s prospects of restructuring? An example of the second category could be an investor’s release of information about disputes between factions of the Board of Directors on restructuring initiatives where the company believes that the information being released generates uncertainty within the company’s supply chain.

Avoiding disqualifying conflicts of interest on account of pre-petition advice provided to a company and its management in light of the Court’s recent opinion in In re Brown Publishing Company, Case No. 10-73295 (Bankr. E.D.N.Y. Apr. 29, 2013). As summarized by Bankruptcy Judge Dorothy Eisenberg: “Attorneys retained to represent a corporate debtor are often asked to provide some guidance or legal advice to its principals on their personal behalf. At times, there is a fine line between debtors’ counsel’s capacity to differentiate between adequate information on behalf of the debtor and legal advice strictly for the benefit of the individuals.”

Last year our esteemed panel split about their views on investing prospects for 2013, and now with the year coming to an end, it looks like both sides were right. There was a lot to like about the investing climate this year, and yet it seems fraught with risk. Last year one thing the panel did agree on was that airline stocks looked cheap given the pending USAir/American airlines merger, and that advice appears to have been correct. Join us to hear what our panel thinks about industries in disequilibrium this year.
